According to CHI'DN Man, Macao Communist generally considered a follower of FANG Fang, relations between TSING Sheng and FANG Fang are not cordial, primarily because TSETG, who is junior to FANG, feels that FANG takes credit for work accomplished through his efforts.

In Chungshan relations between native Communists (T'u Kung $\pm \stackrel{!}{\pm}$) and officers of the Kwangtung-Kwangsi Column have become strained, because of disagreements over privileges. As a result, HUANG Lo-t'ien (), deputy director of the Chungshan Military Control Commission, has been ordered to Lungmen for "training." Two other local Communist Leaders, LIAIG (光), formerly commander of an independent regiment and HUAIG Kuo-yu (黃 夏 方), chief of the li District of Chungshan, have returned to the Wukueishan area where they have joined two former local Communist leaders, CHENG Chieng (京) and CHIH Man-kiang (之清康) in the fight against the Communists.

Comment. As the Communists approached Canton, the local Communists planned to accommodate themselves to the new regime and cooperate with them, but in the year which has passed they have decided that they cannot get along with the Communists and have made plans for active opposition.
